INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR CHRISTIAN STUDIES AT THE
ORTHODOX CHURCH OF GEORGIA

International Scientific Symposium

“God, Homeland and Human-Being”

The symposium is dedicated to the 1700th anniversary of the conversion of Kartli

The 1700th anniversary of the declaration of Christianity as the state religion represents a unique opportunity to once again demonstrate our country's place in world civilization, to understand and embrace Georgia's spiritual and historical path, its cultural heritage and values, on which our national identity is based.

The international symposium "God, Homeland and Human-Being" aims to provide a multifaceted understanding of the connection among these values - from a historical, theological, philosophical, cultural and sociological perspective.

The event will bring together local and international scientists to share their experiences and knowledge, deepen dialogue and highlight the common values that have formed the spiritual and intellectual treasure of humanity for centuries.

The following sections will work at the symposium:

1. History, Ethnology and Archeology
2. Language and Literature
3. Culture and Art
4. Religion and Science
5. Martyrdom and Citizenship
